#	Responses	Date
1	Information is often gleaned second or third hand from other parents	12/7/2014 11:27 PM
2	Too many different types of communication methods [text, school gateway, facebook, email, website, book bags] and not able to include both parents.	12/4/2014 11:08 PM
3	I get texts, emails and see Facebook posts but school shouldn't assume everyone else can. Also diary on website updated a while ago with inservice dates/Xmas plans but parents weren't told.	12/4/2014 1:14 PM
4	Parents sometimes have to ask for information that hasn't been volunteered, sometimes it would also be good to have information about upcoming events a bit further in advance so parents can prepare. For example information on the nativity plays was quite late in coming, sometimes parents need to budget a month ahead to pay for costumes etc Also would like to be told if my child has hurt herself, she tells me sometimes that she has needed an icepack or been hit by another child but no information about these occurrences is ever conveyed by a member of staff.	12/4/2014 1:32 AM
5	School is using emails and texting more and not all parents/carers have this facilities. So I feel old fashion paperwork would be better.	12/4/2014 1:15 AM
6	School strives to communicate issues through but I believe the communication can be better improved for further enhancement and efficiency	12/4/2014 12:46 AM

Vision and Values - Bobbing School

7	Too many means to communicate so messages can be missed- is it in an e-mail, text, gateway or on Facebook????	12/3/2014 1:51 PM
8	Because they only tell you things they want you to know.	12/3/2014 10:23 AM
9	Issues at school are heard by the children and not the school	12/3/2014 9:15 AM
10	i dont always receive texts about events and checking the web site is time consuming	12/3/2014 8:10 AM
